

“Digital agriculture based on plant image science with emphasis on weed management”

Prof. Do-Soon Kim

- Chair, the Seoul National University Senate
- President of International Weed Science Society
- President of Korean Society of Plant Image Science

Do-soon kim is a professor in the department of agriculture, forestry and bioresources, college of agriculture and life sciences (cals), seoul national university. His research focuses on weed ecology and physiology, with particular emphasis on echinochloa species, crop-weed competition, herbicide resistance, and plant image science. He currently serves as chair of the seoul national university senate and is president of the international weed science society.

Professor kim received his bsc and msc in agronomy from seoul national university and his phd in weed science from the university of bristol, uk. He has published approximately 100 peer-reviewed articles, co-authored books and book chapters, and delivered numerous invited lectures internationally. His professional experience includes leadership roles in academia and industry, as well as visiting professorships, and he actively contributes to international scientific societies and journal editorial boards.